

WHAT IS A

Natal Chart Reading

A look at how a natal chart can be interpreted

BY STEPHANIE ASHER OF STARRYEYED CHAOS

What does a natal chart look like?

Interpreting the chart

Here is an example of what a reading can entail. These are all personalized for the individual.

You are right on the cusp of Libra and Scorpio for the first house but there is more lean towards Scorpio as your ascendant. Scorpio Ascendent in the first house has you and the world not so sure what to make of yourself. You have that sense of mystery about you without even trying to be mysterious! This is why your Sun in Scorpio in the first house has you exploring and learning different aspects of who you are. You are up for the task! You encourage others around you to learn with you. Your Moon is in Taurus in your seventh house where exploring relationships to find "yourself" (the recurrent theme) can be tedious work and have you a little on edge during the process of self exploration. Mercury in Libra in the first house has you feeling comfortable with intimate conversations with like minded people. You even have that ability to sway people to your side with the smooth talking at times (and not in the trying to trick you way). Venus in Scorpio in the first house has you feeling all the feels all at once! Everyone in your circle influences your emotions. This may be why you have a select small and safe inner circle. This moves you to really thrive around those who are happy and have healthy dispositions for you to "feed" off of so to speak.

Taking on others emotions without knowing what is happening is too easy for you. Continuing the Scorpio theme in the first house, Mars can throw you into that bipolar emotional rollercoaster far too easily. Your motivation to continue in a forward positive momentum needs the right mindset and sometimes (as you may feel) the perfect conditions to maintain stability. Otherwise you could burst! Maybe take up boxing as a healthy outlet for balance maintenance. Jupiter in the fifth house in Pisces moves you towards that happiness bus and filling it with like minded happy people. You want to make that deeper connection with others but may not outwardly show that which throws others off their game trying to figure you out (more theme). Saturn in the ninth house in Cancer longs for all the knowledge and wanting to share that knowledge with others all the time. The greatest passions you have come shining through and you could go on for days talking about what you know with great enthusiasm. Uranus in Libra in the first house shows the transformation you've made and drives you to make sure others acknowledge that process too because you have come a long ways! Neptune in Sagittarius in the second house notes that you like to have a grand appearance and be well put together even when you are falling apart. None of this is to be a show off but you are really proud of your well deserved accomplishments as you should be.

Pluto in Libra in your twelfth house takes that search you have going on to see where you fit into this world and magnifies it x10.

You are really desiring balance in life and strive to reach that. Sometimes you may seek too much of the perfect balance which then requires men with a straight jacket to guide you back on a normalized track. Maybe sip on some chamomile tea and meditate for clarity on the balance you seek. Bringing it all home with your North and South Node, the North Node is in the second house in Sagittarius guiding you to how you may feel others should see you but really you are looking for what you need to see in yourself. Your South Node is in your eighth house in Gemini where you easily can see the pros and cons to outside situations, manage others in various ways, and can communicate formally. Now is the time to focus on you and manage what you need in your life!
